ANNUAL REPORT

Empower. Mentor. Cascade.

Since 2007, Generations For Peace has trained 8,920 volunteers from 50 countries, and with our support, volunteer-led programmes have reached 229,020 children, youth, and adults in communities facing different forms of violence. Our cascading model, in which volunteers we have trained directly (1st generation) go on to train other 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and even up to 6th generation volunteers in their communities, increases our reach and reinforces the sustainability of our efforts.

HRH Prince Feisal Al Hussein and Samsung Levant Corporate Marketing Director Fadi Awni Abu Shamat present certificates to the 2015 Generations For Peace Samsung Advanced Training Facilitation Team from Nigeria, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Jordan, Yemen, Zimbabwe, Canada, and Pakistan.

“Generations For Peace programmes around the world are fostering greater tolerance and respect for diversity. They are giving youth the opportunities for leadership, significance, autonomy in decision-making; and a sense of belonging to a positive peer group and collective effort delivering concrete impact in their community.”

HRH Prince Feisal Al Hussein of Jordan
Founder and Chairman of Generations For Peace

“I volunteer with GFP to give back to my community... I give back to students to have the same chances at life that I have had. I feel that you should not volunteer for the praise or to boost your resume. You should not do it because it gives your organisation a community service for some kind of quota. You should do it simply because it must be done.”

“With GFP, I am discovering every day a new and a different aspect of volunteering and how I can promote positive change in my community. Since 2013, GFP has been my family who guides me to be an active citizen and to dream about a peaceful world based on dialogue and mutual respect. I have also learnt how to view sport as a vehicle for peace building and conflict transformation.”

Our volunteers live in and implement programmes in conflict contexts across the Middle East, Africa, Asia, and Europe to address:

- inter-tribal, inter-ethnic, and inter-religious violence
- gender inequality
- post-conflict trauma response, reconciliation, and reintegration
- exclusion of minorities (including Internally Displaced People, refugees & people with a disability)
- challenges of integration in multicultural society.

GFP's unique curriculum empowers our volunteers with practical knowledge and skills to apply peace-building theory to situations of destructive conflict in their communities: to organise activities for children, to work with youth and adults, to train other youth volunteers, and to gather support by building and strengthening community networks and partnerships.

Programme approaches used include sport, arts, advocacy, dialogue, and empowerment.

“ I volunteer with GFP firstly, because its integrated approach has contributed to my growth and my self-confidence, and secondly, because the GFP activities have strengthened the bond between me and my community.”

Zainab Nankya
1st generation
Pioneer, Uganda

“ I believe the GFP mission meets the needs of my community and my organisation. I feel happy, productive and committed to serve my community when I help put a smile on young peoples' faces that leads to positive change.”

“As a child, I experienced serious conflicts which led to the loss of many lives, and made people feel incomplete. I have always hoped for a way to change things. I volunteer with GFP because with their programmes, I can work towards my dream of a violence-free society in Kaduna State.”

“I joined GFP in 2012 to change the world and make it a better place, but GFP changed me and made me a better person. I volunteer because it establishes strong relationships, it's good for my career and for my society. Being a GFP volunteer gives me a sense of purpose.”
